

Challenge: Immediate Virus Removal At Client Company

It was about 4:40 pm on a beautiful day in August when we received a phone call from one of our clients. This was no ordinary call. An enterprise wide virus had infected our client. The virus was causing employee downtime by the minute and they desperately needed a solution. We all know how costly it can be to have one employee out of work. Can you imagine the cost of a whole department being down?

Without any hesitation, we responded to the call immediately. We needed at least 6 resources to start updating workstations with the latest anti-virus protection software. This is not the first time a virus has hit one of our clients. Therefore, we pro-actively had a pipeline of candidates that could perform the virus updates and understood the severity of the situation. Within two hours of the initial call, our consultants had arrived at the client's site and had begun their task. The consultants worked through the night and the company was able to operate as normal the very next morning. Because we pro-actively recruit for our clients we are able to provide a level security that cannot be rivaled. We take the time to understand your business and create contingency plans for such emergency calls.

There are many people who fit a written job description. However, the reality of recruiting is much more complex. This methodology has made our clients feel like business partners instead of a vendor. Carrying the burden of responsibility while understaffed will eventually take its toll on the employees who are putting in extra effort to combat being understaffed. Those scenarios usually end up with burned out employees, low morale and possibly even turnover in your most critical positions. Please talk to us if you think you might benefit from our Operational model and expertise. It is never too late to plan!

We understand how our clients operate and are committed to offering solutions geared toward business objectives and hiring strategies. Strategic staffing can be utilized to save time, money and morale.